Hello I'm Adam,

I'm an artist and designer who has worked in the design and media industry for 8 years. I started my professional path in apparel design, as a production designer, separating artwork for screen-printing. Eventually I decided to go back to school and learn more about different aspects of art and entertainment, and I finished my Bachelors Degree in Fine Arts from University of Southern California. After graduating, I worked at a marketing agency doing multimedia projects, both digital and print design, as well as video. I moved on from that role to my current role at The Ohio State University as a graphic designer in the Office of International Affairs.

I'm a person who believes that there's no such thing as too much knowledge, and believe if you really want to master your craft, you should learn everything there is to know in your field. In the rapidly growing world of digital creativity that is a huge gamut of software and tools used in the creation process.

I love learning about the functionality of all of those tools, and am willing to learn any process to creating the thing that is envisioned. My most recent endeavor is in UX Design process and software. More than anything I love to help others learn to facilitate their own vision, whether from my own experience or in a co-operative space. This makes me a great team player and an efficient organizer.

My ideal job is a space that has long-term goals and complex projects that need an abstract thinker who can contribute. I am interested in gaming and new energy as fields, I think both have altruistic purposes which align with my moral scope. I would love to remain remote, but am open to relocating with my family with the right incentive.

UX/UI Product Design

The following slide is a collection of applications developed in an Ohio State UX Bootcamp, which concluded with a certification in UX and UI Product Design. The course was a 6-month rigorous overview of different facets of user research, the design process, front-end development, HTML, CSS and JavaScript coding and prototyping. Software utilized includes Figma, Microsoft Visual Studio Code, and GitHub. Below are QR codes/hyperlinks to various case studies developed over the course in the program.

Design - PRISM Marketing

The following 2 slides are a collection of designs developed as a Multimedia Designer and Videographer for PRISM Marketing, a marketing firm whose clients are primarily in the healthcare and pharma industries. I developed collateral from style guides, created branded media suites and promotional graphics. I also ideated on product campaigns and internal messaging which were distributed through different video channels. Some of those video campaigns are presented in my Editing and MoGraph reels, which you can find on the links page on my website.

Chief Pharmacy Officer Pilar

Who is she?
Pilar is responsible for the pharmacy function at a large EDN (which is the largest revenue generator in the system). She is more business than pharmacy, a role that puts her PharmD and her MBA to constant good use. As the EDN has grown, Pilar seeks to standardize as much as she can across the system and to get newly acquired facilities up to speed quickly and efficiently. Pilar, who is in her late 40s, oversees the expansion of pharmacy services to new care settings such as clinics and infusion centers, and ensures care coordination with other system leaders. Pilar oversees formulary management, the pharmacy budget, and compliance with regulatory and accreditation requirements. Pilar reports to the EDN CEO and manages the pharmacy staff throughout the system. She also consults and meets regularly with providers. Pilar also has to manage personnel issues across the system. She also consults and meets regularly with providers, and has to manage personnel issues across the system.

What keeps her up at night?
• Improving patient care and adherence while maintaining or reducing costs – at while expanding pharmacy services.
• Adapting to the constant changes in the payer market that are exacerbated by high-cost specialty medications.
• Evolving the patient continuum to outpatient settings with a value-based lens.
• Managing through labor shortages and unexpected leaves of absence.

What are her biggest pain points?
• Reimbursement challenges, including pre-authorizations.
• 340B, Medicare, Medicaid program management.
• Drug shortages and drug delay.

Pilar needs a partner that will help her:
• Build customized solutions based upon her challenges.
• Lower the overall costs of medication through flexible consignment programs.
• Reduce rejected claims with innovative reimbursement solutions.
• Generate insights and provide the products, technologies and knowledge needed to help manage the rising costs of specialty medications and biosimilars.
• Customize a model for the most effective and efficient delivery of medications.
• Understand the hospital's opportunity for new outpatient pharmacies and/or help optimize the performance of existing ones.

What does Pilar need to know?
Pilar understands her problems and knows that she can't do this alone. She needs a multi-disciplined team who understands the entire picture – clinical and financial. She also needs outside expertise who has helped other healthcare systems. There are similar challenges though she needs a partner who can understand her unique regional nuances and is willing to customize offerings for her. Ultimately, Pilar needs to help the health system deliver the highest quality care at the lowest possible cost.

Messaging summary
We can help Pilar solve the most pressing challenges facing her EDN hospital pharmacy operations by providing insights and expertise around three key areas:
1. Helping her to adapt to high-cost and emerging medications
2. Enabling her to meet shifts in patient volumes and changing reimbursement models
3. Optimizing her supply chain to help the pharmacy run efficiently
